

Brad Milkwick is a claimant's attorney in Morgan & Morgan's recently-opened Brunswick office.

Brad is originally from Northwest Georgia and grew up in the Atlanta area. He attended college at Brigham Young University, and entered law school after working a number of years for various companies in China. Brad attended The Florida State University College of Law in Tallahassee, Florida where he had an impressive academic record, making the Dean's List regularly, earning merit-based awards, publishing in two law journals, and graduating near the top of his class. Upon graduation from law school, Brad joined a prestigious general trial practice firm in northwest Georgia for several years before focusing his practice exclusively on workers' compensation. Brad has practiced workers' compensation law at the trial, appellate, superior court, and Court of Appeals level. He has tried more than 80 cases in various courts throughout the state, achieving exceptional results for his clients. Brad is also proud to have received a number of awards for pro bono service on behalf of low income families and the working community of Georgia. Brad is a member of the American Association of Justice, The Georgia Trial Lawyers Association Workers' Compensation Claimant's Lawyers Section, The Workers Injury Law & Advocacy Group, and the Workplace Injury Section of the Georgia Bar. He is also licensed in the State of Florida.

His hobbies include spending time with his family, music, chess, coaching youth sports, reading, and spending time outdoors.
