

Veronica L. Richardson is the managing partner of Richardson Law, LLC.

She previously defended employers and insurance companies in workers' compensation matters for over ten years. She then made the decision to use all that she learned to help injured workers get the benefits they deserve. She is passionate in her mission: working hard, through fearless advocacy, to achieve the best results for her clients. Veronica was born and raised in Atlanta, Georgia. Her path of higher education began at the University of Georgia's Terry College of Business, where she majored in International Business, with specializations in Italian and Marketing. She then attended the University of Georgia, School of Law, and graduated in 2006. While in law school, Veronica founded the Labor and Employment Law Association (LELA). She also competed in several moot court and mock trial competitions.

She was named Best Advocate at the Regional Thurgood Marshall Mock Trial Competition (2005), a semi-finalist in the American Trial Lawyers Association Mock Trial Competition (2006) and coached the national championship team of the Thurgood Marshall Mock Trial Competition (2006). She also served as the Advocacy Chair of the Davenport-Benham Chapter of the Black Law Students Association (BLSA). As a result of her achievements in advocacy, in 2006, Veronica was inducted into The Order of the Barristers for "having exhibited excellence and attained high honor through the art of courtroom advocacy." On October 1, 2018, Veronica opened Richardson Law, LLC, in Atlanta, Georgia. She is proficient in all phases of litigation including depositions, mediations, trials and appeals.

She frequently makes presentations and conducts educational seminars regarding workers' compensation claims including: the 2015 Workers' Compensation Law Institute, and the State Board of Workers' Compensation's 2018 and 2019 Regional Educational Series. In 2017, she joined the faculty at the University of Georgia, School of Law, as an Adjunct Professor.
